"I never feel lonely in a bookstore," says Holmes after hitting Left Bank Books on West Fourth Street. "I'm in book clubs with my sister and a friend. When I say book clubs, I mean I read a book and love it and send it to them, or the other way around. We never really meet to discuss the book." Louis Vuitton silk dress and lizard pumps. J. Crew straw bag. Tod's crocodile cuffs. Christine Van Der Hurd 18kt-gold hoops with gemstones. Previous page: DKNY Underwear robe.

“Being the youngest, I wanted my own identity. And for some reason I thought it would be possible to be an actress, even though I was from Ohio.”

“Billy’s is my spot,” says Holmes, seated in her favorite local bakery. “The day I got my place I had cupcakes brought to me by a friend. I had to promise myself to go only once a week, because otherwise I’ll be a moose.” Bottega Veneta silk dress. Christine Van Der Hurd 18kt-gold hoops with gemstones. Her own necklace.

"I found my local restaurants, my Thai place, my sushi place," says Holmes, shown at nightspot Ono. "A dear friend who lives in the neighborhood told me where to go, so there wasn't a lot of trial and error. The great thing about New York is that you always want to find the new place." Calvin Klein crushed-satin shell and matching skirt. Tod's suede sandals. Christine Van Der Hurd garnet-and-turquoise necklace.
