This month White shares her experiences at the spring 2011 couture collections in Paris, and takes us behind the scenes of her lush story shot by Craig McDean, "One of a Kind" (page 82).

"I have a really strange accent. I don't really know what it is. It's kind of been bastardized."

"I'd rather fly than be invisible. But I'd like a tail. If I had sort of a mutant feature, I think a tail would be pretty cool."

APRIL'S MOST WANTED

What we're lusting after now.

"Navy is definitely having a moment this spring! Calvin Klein [left] and Fendi offer a great alternative to everyone's staple black dress and trousers."
—NORA MILCH, Assistant Market Editor

"I'm a big fan of the design collective Rich Brilliant Willing and their practical, humor-filled style. For their latest work, Pro Forma, they've created limited-edition personal-storage pieces inspired by international air-shipping containers."
—TALYA COUSINS, Senior Accessories/Jewelry Editor (at Volume Gallery, Chicago, through April 3; wvolumes.com)

"I'm a fanatic about glasses, so when I heard that Warby Parker was offering chic frames with prescription lenses for $95 (!), I was doubtful. But after shopping the company's amazingly user-friendly website, I'm a total believer. Best of all, they're introducing a line of sunglasses this month."
—TED MONCREIFF, Executive Editor (warbyparker.com)

"Wendy Nichol's bullet bags became a cult item last year, and now the New York designer is making them even more coveted by collaborating with Vanderhurd, a London-based textile house, on a limited edition of the pouches made from handwoven silk dhurrie."
—KARIN NELSON, Features Editor (at Wendy Nichol Studio and lagarconne.com; $900)
